School Overview

The University of South Wales was established in 2013 following the merger of the University of Glamorgan and the University of Wales, Newport. A modern, ambitious university, the University of South Wales makes a real difference to the lives of their students, staff and the communities which surround them. With campuses in Cardiff, Newport, Pontypridd and Dubai, the University is renowned for its partnerships with major employers. Their industry connections and emphasis on equipping students with real world experiences make South Wales graduates among the most employable in the UK. University of South Wales strives to stay true to their core values of being Professional, Responsive, Inspiring and Creative.
