I wanted to study in the UK because the engineering equipment at the University of Huddersfield is better and you get more experience. There are more international students in the UK. I hope this will give me more international, critical thinking and will improve my English. The only thing that surprised me about the UK is the happiness. I always drink coffee on a Sunday and when I go to sit and drink I saw people smiling. I see that people here are so happy.

Huddersfield is amazing. Some people think it is a bit quiet, but it is great for students. I can easily go out in Manchester or Liverpool and then when I want to rest I stay here and study. It is the perfect place for students. Everywhere is cool.

See yourself in Huddersfield

There is more to this historic Yorkshire town than you might think. Mountainous countryside, industrial history and a thriving town centre are waiting to be discovered.

Entertainment and culture

A theatre for local arts and an extensive range of new shops, cafés, bars and restaurants provide plenty of entertainment. Huddersfield hosts an annual food and drink festival and the Tour de France even cycled through the town in 2014. Huddersfield Town football club is in the English Championship league and has a 30,000-seat stadium close to the University.

Industrial history

The town has a long industrial history, some of which still remains today. Taylor and Lodge, one of the oldest wool manufacturers in Huddersfield, is still producing high volumes of wool. The company even provided material for the Royal Wedding of Kate Middleton and Prince William in 2011.

Breathtaking scenery

Explore the nearby areas of outstanding natural beauty, with the Yorkshire Dales to the north and the Peak District to the south. Wharfedale is the highest peak in the Dales and offers spectacular views of England.

Even historic York, famous for the War of the Roses, can be reached in just 50 minutes by train. London is 2 hours and 40 minutes away by train, and Manchester Airport 55 minutes by train.

The University encourages people to participate in a lot of programmes but I never thought I would be a person who would do these things. Then I did four placements in one year in different countries. I didn't expect myself to be as involved as I was, but the environment pushed me to do more for myself and experience new things.

Studying at the International Study Centre has helped me a lot with my academic skills. For my work placement, it helps me a lot for my future career because I explored most of the IT area. It was a mix of many roles within one department and that has really enhanced my future career.

I've learned so much about team working and communication. Everyday you need to communicate to other people and get your message heard by other people, at the same time whilst hearing them. I think most of these skills I've actually improved, and my acumen and my knowledge and experience has just increased.

There is a huge difference studying in the UK to back home. No matter what course you want to study, I feel like there are more opportunities here. You can get a work placement, or you can get enough experience before you begin your actual job. Even the lab works we are doing here are really serious. I don't think I would have had so much exposure back home.

The teaching standard is very different from back home. It's more practical here, and you have presentations and practical classes. I want to study Hospitality Business Management. In Bangladesh, hospitality is a very new subject, so it's not as developed. Whereas it's been here for a longer period of time, so I think studying here will be better because the teachers are more experienced and I can gain more knowledge.

For me it's all about the student; meeting them face-to-face and seeing them progress. That progression could be developing confidence, supporting them to contact employers or helping them to decide their career direction. It's not all about getting them into that job, it's about raising their aspirations. We encourage students to take control of their own careers.

I get to meet people from all around the world, and I get to meet people from my own country who are living here. Some of my friends are domestic friends, like English people but most are international friends from all around the world.

We get to know a lot about each other: we try each other's foods, we try each other's music. It's a multicultural area.
